Government trying to revive the decaying culture of tribes: Tribal Welfare Minister at EMRS Kala Utsav

The state government is implementing various plans to revive the decaying cultural traits of tribal people. Towards this direction, EMRS Sanskriti, Sahitya and Kala Utsav has been organised. Through this kind of festival young generation could be attracted to their traditional culture, stated the Tribal Welfare Minister Bikash Debbarma yesterday at Agartala Town Hall. He was addressing the gathering at the Town Hall at the two-day state-level EMRS, EMRS Sanskriti, Sahitya and Kala Utsav. He urged the parents to let their children get involved in cultural activities as well, beside their studies.

Around 400 students of 12 Eklavya Model Residential School under the Tripura Tribal Welfare Residential Educational Institutions Society, took part in this programme. The event comprised dance and musical performances, instrumental, storytelling competition in Hindi and English etc. Welcome address was delivered by the joint director of Tribal Welfare department Sumitra Debnath. Deputy director Debi Halam, Principals of EMRS and other teachers were also present there.
