Tribal Welfare Minister Visits Under-Construction
Eklavya Model Residential School in Karbook

Tribal Welfare Minister Vikas Debbarma conducted a site visit yesterday to the Eklavya Model Residential School which is currently under construction at the Karbook Sub-division headquarters. The school being built at an estimated cost of 48 crore rupees, is set to enhance educational facilities for tribal students in the region. During his visit, Minister Debbarma inspected several key facilities of the upcoming school, including the kitchen, dormitory, student residence, and science laboratory. Expressing satisfaction with the progress, he directed the concerned officials to ensure the completion of the construction within the stipulated timeframe. Accompanying the minister were MLA Sanjay Manik Tripura, Sub-Divisional Magistrate Partha Das, Karbook Block BDO Dibyendu Das, and various officials from the Tribal Welfare and Sub-Division offices. The team assessed the construction progress and discussed further steps to ensure the timely and efficient completion of the project. In addition to his visit to the Eklavya Model Residential School, Minister Debbarma also toured the student dormitory of Panjigham Class XII School in the Karbook Sub-division. He instructed the officials to initiate the necessary renovations to improve the living conditions for the students. The construction of the Eklavya Model Residential School in Karbook is a significant step towards providing quality education and improved facilities for tribal students, aligning with the broader goals of the Tribal Welfare Department to uplift and empower the tribal communities through education.
