Workshop on National Generic Document
Registration System held at Agartala

Under the aegis of the revenue department a workshop on National Generic Document Registration System (NGDRS) was held at Hotel Polo Towers, Agartala today. The chief secretary J.K. Sinha inaugurated the workshop. Addressing the workshop the chief secretary said, NGDRS is a very significant system for online registration of documents. This system will make the land registration process easier. He said, land issues are quite complicated. This system will help the people sell or hand over land smoothly and safely.

Speaking at the workshop the secretary of the revenue department Brijesh Pandey said, with the introduction of National Generic Document Registration System common people could easily avail land registration service in a transparent manner. To ensure wide use of this system the state government has taken initiative to modernize the sub-registry offices across the state. among others present in the workshop were additional secretary of the revenue department Tamal Majumder and director of the land records and settlement department Subhash Saha. District magistrates of all the eight districts, additional district magistrates, and officials of different levels from the revenue department took part in the workshop.
